SUPPORT NETWORK FOR WOMEN VICTIMS OF MALE VIOLENCE

Què és la Xarxa?

The Jobcentres Network supporting women victims of male violence is a personalised care service in employment issues for women victims of male violence which is provided by the SOC's Jobcentres.

A team of specialised professionals in each of the 69 Jobcentres gives advice about jobs and individualised support in finding work for all women who are victims of male violence and who choose to ask for the service.

Who is it for?

Any woman who is a victim of male violence and would like to have a support and guidance service to help her in her search for work.

What is its purpose?

Its purpose is to provide access to resources and services which help women victims of male violence to find quality jobs which enable them to recover and get back on their feet.

Financial independence is a crucial factor in the empowerment and socialisation of people and a key part of the recovery process for women victims of male violence and their children.

What is the care model like?

It operates locally in a network:
We work closely in constant coordination with the professionals and services in the Comprehensive Care and Recovery Network for women victims of male violence across the region.

Confidentiality:

The service ensures data is kept secret as a safety and protection measure for women. Using the service is confidential and optional.

Personalised care:

Individualised support providing women with the resources best suited to their situation and meeting their employment needs throughout the recovery process.

What are the SOC's services?

Education:

with vocational training to recycle or gain occupational skills.

Occupational experience:

through programmes such as "Work and Training" run by local councils and offering a one-year contract for women victims of male violence.

Job search:

through specific programmes and the Jobcentres.

Blended programmes:

combining guidance, tutoring, training and work experience.
